MERIDIAN, Nov. 14

The Hotel Meridian's board will not take up StarLift's letter of intent for the hotel's roof until after the city's Dec. 3 study session on vertiports, the board chair said Saturday.

"A letter can wait for a meeting," the chair said. The hotel has signed the letter of intent with StarLift, but its board has not voted on it.

Neither StarLift nor Harborline has filed for a vertiport, according to the latest account on Saturday. Neither company had answered a joint letter from Crown Hill and Water Street neighbors asking for a noise study.

The council transportation committee holds a public study session at City Hall on Dec. 3. The session will take public comment and will not include a vote.

StarLift unveiled its Skycab Jet on Thursday. The aircraft is designed to carry nine passengers and a pilot. So far only a one-third-scale model has flown, and it flew on a tether, according to the company's own account.

Rafe Kildare, StarLift's chief executive, declined again on Saturday to say why the company's Skycabs were grounded in 1968. It was the third day in a row he had turned the question aside.

Mr. Kildare unveiled the Skycab Jet at 11 a.m. Thursday on the roof of the Grand Mariner tower in Ocean Shores. He described an aircraft that lifts like an air taxi and flies on wings. StarLift projects a trip to Seattle in about 1 hour 40 minutes for about $249, and a trip to Portland in about 1 hour 10 minutes. It puts the cost of the program at $580 million.

The tethered one-third-scale prototype flew at StarLift's Shasta Valley test field, the company said. StarLift says a full-size prototype is to fly in 2027 and that its application to the Federal Aviation Administration comes next year. It is aiming for passenger service in 2029.

The Grand Mariner tower has signed for StarLift's first coastal pad, the company said. On Thursday the Hotel Meridian's general manager said the board had not voted on the letter of intent for the hotel roof. The city had no StarLift filing that day.

At 10:30 a.m. Friday, the planning department and the city clerk said neither StarLift nor its rival, Harborline, had filed anything for a vertiport on a roof or a pier.

At 3 p.m. Friday, Crown Hill Neighbors and Water Street Neighbors sent their joint letter. They also asked for seats at the Dec. 3 session. By Friday evening neither company had answered.

Fourth Grader Lights Meridian's One Flame on the First Strike

Ember Keeper Pilar kindles the fire in Garrow Square at sundown as every other fire in the city goes out

BY THE VANGUARD DESK

MERIDIAN, Nov. 14 – Every fire in Meridian went out at sundown Saturday, and a fourth grader named Pilar, this year's Ember Keeper, lit the one flame in Garrow Square on the first strike.

The flame was lit at 4:58 p.m., marking Ember Eve, the night before Beacon Night, which falls on Sunday. The city said the square was full and that there was no trouble.

The fire department had no chimney calls after sundown and called it the "quietest evening of our year."

The square opened at 3 p.m., and streets immediately around Garrow Square were closed to cars from 3 p.m. to 8 p.m., according to reports.

Pilar, whose surname has not been given, was drawn by lot at City Hall on Thursday at 10:10 a.m. The city recalled the moment her name came up: "Her teacher cried first, and then everybody did."

The city's attention now turns to Sunday. Plans for Beacon Night include Long Table street closures around Garrow Square and along Water Street from late morning, according to reports. Lantern boats are to go out at dusk, about 5 p.m., riding the ebb after the 2:34 p.m. high water. The Quiet Minute is set for 8:15 p.m., and the old Spit light is to be lit afterward, the reports said.

The city first posted the Long Table closures on Monday at 1:45 p.m. Under that notice, the streets around Garrow Square and all of Water Street close from late morning Sunday, with no reopening time given.

The lantern boats will leave from the Embarcadero, the Samoa side and every bay dock, the city said Monday.

Beacon Night Holiday Clears House, 251-170, With a Lake Clause

Friday, Nov. 13, with the Lakewood delegation voting yes as a block. As passed, the bill does not apply to this year's Beacon Night.

Its fate now rests with the Senate, where no date is set. The Senate majority leader's office promised a hearing in the new year and a floor vote "when the calendar allows." Speaker Rowan said the Senate "can take it up when it likes."

The amendment that brought Lakewood aboard was adopted by voice vote at 11:15 a.m. It was a shorter version of a lake amendment the House had turned down the day before.

That broader amendment failed on a voice vote at 12:20 p.m. Meridian time Thursday, with no recorded vote requested. The Lakewood delegation had offered it at 1 p.m. on Tuesday, Nov. 10. It would have counted any water as a coast if a person could stand on its shore and not see the other side.

Members from Arcadia were quick to test the definition. One noted on Tuesday that it would admit Lake Superior and the Salton Sea.

The House resumed debate on the bill at 9 a.m. on Monday, Nov. 9, taking up a measure that would make Nov. 15 a federal holiday and write the 8:15 Quiet Minute into law. Debate ran into a second day on Tuesday, when Speaker Rowan kept the vote for Friday.

Beacon Night began on the Cascadia coast in 1888 and has been a Cascadia state holiday since statehood in 1947.

The shoreline test drew the week's sharpest line on Wednesday, when an Arcadia member offered Lakewood some advice for measuring a coast: "Bring a ruler and a good pair of binoculars."

Larrabure to Lead Argentina at Montevideo Lumber Talks of the day for the talks at 7:30 a.m. Meridian time Saturday, it was reported: a morning session, lunch at one, then an afternoon session. A joint statement will come only if both delegations sign one, according to the published order.

Argentina's 12 percent duty on American softwood begins Dec. 1, and Mexico will not follow it, according to reports Saturday.

Governor Rina Tanaka is keeping Beacon Night at home in Yreka, it was reported Saturday, and will fly to Washington after the Quiet Minute. She is to meet President Callahan with three coast mill owners and a Scotia millworker at 9 a.m. Meridian time Monday, Nov. 16.

On Friday, Argentina's trade ministry said at 5:30 a.m. The White House said the same day that the President would meet the governor, the three mill owners and the millworker on Monday. Argentina's 12 percent tariff still starts Dec. 1.

On Thursday, Uruguay's foreign ministry said it would host the American and Argentine delegations at its ministry in Montevideo. Buenos Aires had proposed the city, and the office of the United States Trade Representative agreed to attend, the ministry said. Argentina describes its tariff as an answer to a United States duty on Argentine wine set in September.

The foreign ministry had confirmed the meeting on Wednesday at 6 a.m. Meridian time. "Both delegations have rooms, the chairs are neutral, and the coffee is as good as you've heard," the ministry said. The consultations do not suspend the tariff on their own.

The talks took shape on Tuesday. At about 6:05 a.m. The trade representative's office accepted at 8:30 a.m. "Montevideo on the nineteenth," the office said. "We'll be there, and we'll bring the mills' numbers."

Later that morning, at 9:30 in Yreka, Governor Tanaka said she would bring three coast mill owners and a Scotia millworker, whom she did not name, to meet the President in Washington on Nov. 16. "I'm bringing people who smell like sawdust," she said.

The dispute moved toward the table on Monday, Nov. 9, when the trade representative's office formally requested consultations with Argentina at 6:30 a.m. Meridian time. The request covers lumber only and does not suspend the tariff. As of 11 p.m. that night, no date for talks had been set.

"We are listening," he said. "Our wine growers have been listening since September."

Second District Gap Holds at 441 as Canvass Runs Through the Weekend

said. No county has reported a change, the office said.

Counties must certify their results by Nov. 24, and the state certifies on Dec. 1. A margin under half a point at certification triggers an automatic recount, which must be finished by Dec. 15.

The new Congress meets Jan. 3, 2027.

Those other races were settled by wider margins. Corinne Vail won the Senate seat over Thomas Edgerly by about 11 points, Dorothea Quill won the First District over Benedikt Saar by about 6, and Leona Hartigan won the Third over Paul Renner by about 20. Edgerly, Saar and Renner conceded last weekend. Measure 7 passed 61 to 39, and Measure M passed 58 to 42.

The count itself is complete. At 1 p.m. on Thursday, Secretary of State Luis Arriaga said every careful ballot had been counted, about 814,300 statewide, and he gave the Second District totals that still stand. On Friday, every county began its canvass, with observers from both Second District campaigns.

The gap moved little in the last days of counting. On Wednesday, Corcoran led 119,890 to 119,421, a margin of 469 votes, with about 600 careful ballots left.

Both campaigns have said they will wait. "We'll wait for the counties like everybody else," Corcoran's campaign said Thursday. Bracco's campaign said, "Four hundred forty-one is close enough to wait."

The candidates struck the same note on Monday, Nov. 9. "Still a lead, and still not a win," Corcoran said. Bracco said, "If the law says count them again, we'll count them again."

Rio Dell Bookkeeper Claims Her Lettering on 41 Wildwood Mailboxes

Beacon Night edition turns to April 8 and a Fieldbrook bus shelter Ida Fenwick re-shingled

Edwina Lark on a step stool painting new numbers on the Wildwood Avenue mailboxes in Rio Dell, from the April 7 story the Star reprinted Saturday. EVENING STAR PHOTO

BY EVENING STAR STAFF

MERIDIAN, Nov. 14 – Edwina Lark, a retired Rio Dell bookkeeper, on Saturday claimed the work on all 41 Wildwood Avenue mailboxes after the Evening Star reprinted its April 7 story showing her on a step stool painting the new numbers.

The Beacon Night edition of the Star reprints April 8. Fenwick does not remember doing it.

Lark's day followed Friday's reprint of April 6, which showed Thaddeus Moran, 71, a retired Weott schoolteacher, planting 60 redwood seedlings along the Weott schoolyard fence with the fourth grade. Moran remembers buying the seedlings in February but nothing of the planting.

On Thursday, the Star reprinted April 5. That story reported that Odell Winship, 70, a retired Orick lineman, was elected master of the Orick Grange, according to minutes in his own hand. Winship remembers nothing of the meeting.

He has had the gavel in his truck since October 1, and he still wants to know who he beat.

SKYFORGE MOBILE. SkyForge. Build your kingdom, forge alliances, and conquer the skies in the mobile strategy game everyone’s talking about. Free to play.

STREAMVAULT. StreamVault. Fifty thousand movies, every major series, live sports, and zero ads on the premium tier. New originals every Friday.

FOGHORN BOOKS. Foghorn Books started in nineteen fifty-one as a used bookshop on Water Street, with a cat named Admiral and a bell over the door. There’s still a cat. Now there’s the Foghorn app too: audiobooks read by people who love them, and new releases the day they come out.

PETS

PAWPAL PET FOOD. Your dog doesn’t care about marketing. They care about real chicken, sweet potato, and blueberries. PawPal makes fresh, vet-approved meals delivered to your door every two weeks.
